This presentation considers issues concerning the problems and challenges at the Basic Education Level in the Global South, Zambia, in particular. Drawing on my experiences as a trainee teacher, a professional teacher at a secondary school, and as a teacher trainer in Zambia including the experience of research work at Masters level qualification and at Doctoral level qualification, the multiple factors affecting the adequate provision and quality of Basic Education in Zambia will be discussed. These problems and challenges include: access, inequality, low learning achievements and low quality education.
