Other items can likely be found as well; it's very difficult to name them all, but if there is something that you need, then it is always a good idea to check one of these kinds of stores, instead of purchasing a new product, to see if you can save some money.

Here's an experience one of our group members had: They went to buy a bicycle, but did not know about these stores or what kind of items they sold, as such stores are much less common in their home country and generally had different products. So this student bought a new bike at a bike shop, for much more than they would've had to pay at a second-hand store (around 10,000 yen, in this case).
